The Coles Sports Center provides an athletic club's array of fitness and sports activities for NYU students and nearby residents. The main lobby runs between a sports court to the left and swimming pool on the right.

LS Series chair segments create sculptural islands of seating for many people in each section of the lobby, which is divided into three lounges by trophy cases.

Plan: Between the trophy cases, LS chairs are set up on a rectangular plan, which is then rearranged for various activities at the Center.

Coordinating benches and tables complete the design of each section, in accenting colors from the fabric on the chairs.

The Coles Center offers many activities, from fitness to varsity sports. Students and neighborhood members may choose from dance, fencing, yoga to racquetball, swimming and wrestling. LS Series chairs and segments offer a variety of seating for study breaks and places to meet friends. Replaceable covers on all of the chairs and benches make them a practical as well as attractive design choice.

Above: LS chairs and benches give generous seating spaces used individually or grouped together in the space. Glass cases act as room dividers while displaying trophies won by NYU athletes.

Bottom: Back to back chair segments create architectural seating forms, making an interesting design while providing maximum seating places within each lounge area.
